Extreme Makeover Home Edition Coming to Fayetteville ... Apparently

2 comments

Mayor Tony Chavonne and other officials have prepared us for a big, secret announcement at 5 p.m. of an entertainment event.

Leave it to Twitter to let the cat out of the bag.

An Asheville TV reporter tweeted that Extreme Makeover Home Edition will be re-doing the house of a Fayetteville family.

This fits with other research our reporters found out about Blue Ridge Log Cabins, a South Carolina firm, which will be involved with the effort apparently and which has also been touting a big, upcoming announcement and linking to Extreme Makeover.

This is all unconfirmed as of yet.

But if it pans out, this will be another positive step for a city that is making some good moves of late. This will be nice, national exposure on a hit TV show.

About the blog

"Myron's Mixer" covers the hot topics of the day, at the local, state and national level, with a strong political bent. The goal, through debate and spirited exchanges, is to offer as much light as heat.

About the blogger

Myron B. Pitts is a metro columnist and blogger on wide-ranging topics. He is a Fayetteville native who was schooled in Chapel Hill and lived near Washington for five years before returning home. His past duties at the paper included serving as editor of Weekender and assistant editor of Saturday Extra. Myron is a music-lover with four iPods, three of them full, and is a fan of the movies, too. He runs and bikes, but not enough of either, and can be found most Sundays having dinner at his folks.
