Workers get ready for their next move as construction of the new Langdon Street home continued Monday.

A staff report

First lady Michelle Obama is expected to be in Fayetteville on Thursday to be part of the "Extreme Makeover: Home Edition" episode.

The ABC reality series has been in Fayetteville since last week filming the construction of a home for Barbara Marshall, a 15-year Navy veteran who is working to end homelessness among female veterans. Marshall created The Steps-N-Stages Jubilee House which provides homeless female veterans with housing and support services.

Obama's visit will be closed to the media, according to a news release. The episode featuring Marshall and the First Lady will air in October.

Construction workers and volunteers have been working around the clock since July 14 to build a second-story home for Marshall and the women she helps at the Jubilee House.

To donate or volunteer, go to joinextreme.com/northcarolina or show up at the Langdon Street parking lot at Fayetteville State University.
